

Dr. Candice Silversides is an Associate Professor of Medicine at the University of Toronto. She is a cardiologist at Mount Sinai and Toronto General Hospitals. She specializes in adult congenital heart disease, pregnancy and heart disease, and echocardiography. She is head of the Obstetric Medicine Program at Mount Sinai Hospital and the University of Toronto and research director at the Toronto Congenital Cardiac Center for Adults. She is the Vice President of the Canadian Adult Congenital Heart Network. She is co-chairing the Canadian Cardiovascular Society Consensus Conference on the management of adults with congenital heart disease and has been involved with a number of other international guidelines and consensus statements.

Return to EDUCATION DAY IN ACHD 2017 Website